Chief Nurse ACT Veronica Croome will open this session. The work of nurses is critical to the provision of quality health care in every sector and our research informs practice, education and policy. Given our pivotal role in healthcare and the demographic imperative of our ageing society it is important to help set future directions by contributing to the AAG Position Paper on the Ageing Research Agenda.

This workshop will ensure specialist gerontological nursing experience and knowledge contributes to Australia's ageing research agenda. The presenters will outline the key elements of the draft AAG Position Paper on the Ageing Research Agenda. This will be followed by general discussion and mapping of the feedback and contribution of the workshop participants. The work of nurses is critical to the provision of quality health care in every sector and our research informs practice, education and policy. Given our pivotal role in healthcare and the demographic imperative of our ageing society it is important to help set future directions.
