Increasingly, we are becoming aware of the growing problem of elder abuse, and the harm that it causes to older people and their families. Elder abuse can detrimentally effect the well-being of older people and shape the care and support that many older people may, or may not, receive at crucial vulnerable stages of their lives.

During this webinar, experts from Australia and New Zealand will explore the problem of elder abuse and the complexities involved in dealing with elder abuse.

This is a complex and frightening issue and in this session participants will learn more about:

- Elder abuse is not only about the physical and emotional trauma that is unfortunately common, but also financial abuse, how we can protect older people from this type of abuse
- Current research from Australian Institute of Family Studies
- Two real life cases studies of abuse and neglect and lessons learnt to achieve successful outcomes
