#AAGCONF18
Welcome to the 51st AAG Conference in Melbourne, Victoria.

As Patron of the Australian Association of Gerontology, I welcome you to the 51st Conference.

As you are very well aware Australia’s population is ageing. In 2017, 15 per cent of Australians were aged 65 or over and by 2057 it is expected this figure will increase to over 20 per cent. Our harmony, prosperity and future as a nation will depend upon how we manage the range of benefits and challenges our ageing demography brings.

The theme for this year’s Conference ‘Advancing Not Retiring: Active Players, A Fair Future’ encapsulates the important discussions Australians need to have as we collectively get older. The commitment by AAG to bring a multi-disciplinary and evidence informed approach, through activities like this Conference, facilitate these conversations.

Our shared opportunity is to appreciate and make the most of the enormous contribution of older people to families, communities and societies and to also recognize that all older people need to be respected, valued and included in our national growth and development.

The AAG and this conference is vital to our understanding of ageing issues and I wish the Association and this conference every success.

Sir Peter Cosgrove
His Excellency General the Honourable Sir Peter Cosgrove AK MC (Retd)
Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia

As Chair of the 2018 Conference Committee, it is my pleasure to welcome you to Melbourne for the 2018 Australian Association of Gerontology Conference, “Advancing not retiring: Active players, a fair future”. Our theme “Advancing not retiring: Active players, a fair future” builds on previous recent AAG conference presentations where the importance of both enabling and appreciating the contributions that older people make to their families, communities and society was acknowledged. The conference theme also acknowledges that opportunities for advancement are not evenly spread across the community. Older people who are poor, homeless, speak a language other than English, are LGBTI or from Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander backgrounds are less likely to be able to advance in older age than those who have more advantages.

This year’s Conference has attracted a record number of presentations that will showcase International and Australian keynote speakers.

I am pleased to welcome all delegates to the 51st Annual Conference in Melbourne.

Everywhere we look we can see examples of fabulous older people who are ‘Advancing not Retiring’. Our 2018 AAG Conference in Melbourne offers a fantastic opportunity to shed light on this theme as we present our research, practice and education about ‘active players, a fair future’. As we are starting to live longer we have more time to contribute to society, and every sector of society can have a role in making ageing a time of strong engagement.

As we promote diversity and engagement for our ageing population, it is not surprising to know that these elements are highly commended highlights of the AAG conference. AAG is the peak organisation linking researchers, educators, policy-makers, practitioners and other experts engaged in ageing issues. Our little ‘family’ is well over 1500 members that work together to improve the experience of ageing through connecting research, policy and practice, with our conferences being the perfect vehicle to do this.

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate both Scientific and Planning committees for their energy and creativity to develop a program that highlights a diverse range of papers, from architects to gerontologists, discussing issues from the social to the clinical.

I look forward meeting you and wish you the best for a great Conference, where we ‘Advance, not retire’.

Associate Professor Briony Dow
2018 AAG Conference Planning Committee Chair

Over the next three days, there will be over 300 presentations from emerging and renowned researchers, aged care health and allied practitioners, policy makers and other professionals working in the space of ageing who will share their experiences, research and knowledge.

The AAG Conference offers a great opportunity to catch up with colleagues and make new friends. At the same there will be many first-time delegates to an AAG Conference and I would like to welcome you to the AAG community.

Melbourne is a vibrant and diverse city with the best coffee in the world – just ask any Melbournian! I hope you we also take the opportunity to explore a little of the world’s most liveable city. Together with the speakers, committee members, I welcome you Melbourne to the 51st AAG Conference.

Associate Professor Christine Stirling
President, Australian Association of Gerontology

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate both Scientific and Planning committees for their energy and creativity to develop a program that highlights a diverse range of papers, from architects to gerontologists, discussing issues from the social to the clinical.
