Cutting Edge Ageing Research

Post-graduate students enrolled in the Faculty of Health at the University of Tasmania will be presenting their most recent findings. This lecture series showcases the diversity of our PhD students who will present three different age-related research topics, including environmental aspects of cognition, dementia and delirium.

In this seminar you will hear from some of Tasmania's leading emerging researchers relating their current research. Come along to:

- Find out more about current ageing research in Tasmania
- Meet with other health professionals and researchers interested in ageing issues

Presentations will run from 4.00 to 5.00 pm, with time for questions after each presenter. Please join us for refreshments and networking from 5.00 to 6.00pm

Presenters

- DAVID WARD
Wicking Dementia Research and Education Centre, UTAS
Research Title: Environmental and genetic contributors to cognitive reserve
- KAREN KENNEDY
Wicking Dementia Research and Education Centre, UTAS
Research Title: The architecture and wellbeing for ageing, dementia and dying
- CECILY POLLARD
School of Health Sciences, UTAS
