Manual Handling in Aged Care: A Bariatric Focus

Health workers in aged care facilities are likely to need to understand the specific manual handling requirements of bariatric clients to ensure their physical health is maintained. Geniene will present information on:

- relevant manual handling legislation
- evidence based practice.
- equipment to safely manage the handling of clients across the aged care spectrum

She will also answer questions you have around manual handling of people in aged care facilities

Hear from Leading Expert

GENIENE THOGERSEN

Physiotherapist,
University of Western Sydney

Geniene is a physiotherapist with 33 years experience working in hospital, aged care and home care roles. She now works as a manual handling co-ordinator and designs manual handling equipment and furniture. She performs risk assessment on furniture and equipment for aged care facilities. Geniene is a member of the national Bariatric support group for allied health professionals and the Australian Association of Manual Handling of People. As well, she currently lectures in this topic at the University of Western Sydney.
